Employment Express: Marching Forward with the Initiative of Unemployment-Free India

With an average population growth of one percent, India continues to be one of the largest developing market economies where the major participation comes from agriculture, industries, and services. Agriculture, however, constitutes of the largest share of employed individuals that also act as the economical backbone of the country. The recent data procured throws light on more than 12 million workers related directly or indirectly to the sector. The other sectors though have witnessed much employability growth, particularly during the pandemic.

Urban India marked an average employment rate of 39 percent in the past year as there was a reasonable amount of growth in the start-ups in almost every sector. This has also potentially increased the number of listings in every industry type, thus contributing to the employment ratio in India. The credit also goes to the talent hiring companies that help companies to set up their employee benchmarks for skills. Employment Express Verband LLP is one such company driving forward with the vision of Unemployment-free India.
